WHAT IS COURAGE COUNTS?

A free 45-minute livestream show that takes a deep dive in each episode, offering nuanced discussion to the topics of social justice and diversity, equity, and inclusion in the workplace. Created by the founder and CEO of Greatheart Consulting, the show will act as a dynamic digital hub where professional voices converge to share inspirational stories and on-the-ground perspectives that will shape the future of the workplace.

This platform is designed for everyone who wants to lead inclusively, hold authentic conversations about creating equitable work environments, and build relationships centered on trust and accountability across the intersections of race, gender, and the full spectrum of identity.

WHY DOES IT MATTER?

For white men, conversations about DEI can be uncomfortable—particularly in the workplace. Without an environment that encourages and cultivates honest, constructive dialogue, white guys are at risk for minimizing the experience of their colleagues and teammates, which is not what they intend.

Courage Counts will discuss inclusion in a timely, relevant, and refreshing way, allowing meaningful exchanges among a diverse array of professionals: white male leaders, C-suite executives from underrepresented backgrounds, middle management, and individual contributors. Most importantly, these exchanges create an opportunity to discuss how all leaders can listen, give and accept feedback courageously, and become inclusive leaders and allies in the workplace.
